Bush fears top aide may hook up a hairball, insiders report

WHITE HOUSE insiders have expressed concern about the mental stability of National Security Advisor Condoleezza Rice after she showed up at a meeting decked out in a full Catwoman costume!

"I hereby declare a one-woman war on terrorism," Condi reportedly told stunned aides as she cracked a black bullwhip on the conference-room table for emphasis.

"From this day forward, let all evil-doers who threaten the security of this nation fear the wrath of Catwoman."

The 14 flabbergasted staffers in attendance used words like "surreal" and "creepy" to describe the scene.

"At first we thought it was all some kind of a gag — although Dr. Rice hasn't told a joke or laughed in public since February 2000," says an eyewitness. "But when she was done with her 'presentation,' she hissed loudly, marched out of the room — swiveling her hips back and forth in those skintight leather pants — and slammed the door behind her.

"We waited for about 30 minutes and she never came back. That's when someone said, 'Oh my God, she's really lost it.' "

Another witness described the National Security Advisor's persona at the meeting as eerily different from her norm.

"Usually Condi is all business, stern and very reserved," explains the source. "At the meeting she was behaving in a much more flamboyant manner — at one point springing up on the table on all fours.

"By the way, she looked surprisingly good in the costume. Ordinarily Condi dresses so conservatively no one notices her figure, but after seeing her in a push-up bra, trust me when I tell you: She's stacked!"

The White House refuses to confirm the unsettling report. But privately, administration officials admit President Bush is "very concerned" about the mental state of his trusted advisor.

ESKIMOS ON MARS: What do you think is?

Eskimos beat us to Mars?

DEAR EDITOR, Talk about a letdown. Eskimos beat us to Mars (August 2, 2004)?!? I can't hide my shock. I'm kind of excited about knowing people can actually survive on other planets, but I have to say I'm disappointed with the Bush administration for trying to keep this discovery under wraps.

Americans have been looking for signs of civilization on Mars for quite some time now, and now it seems the whole search has been a hoax.

If those Eskimos are really over there, then why keep them a secret? Shouldn't we befriend them and learn from them? Why do we always have to learn everything the hard way? I swear, Americans are so stubborn. — Hugh P., Alderport, Maine

Dear Editor, I would just like to make sure all the wives out there read the story about nose hair being the next fashion craze (August 2, 2004). I know my wife is always getting on me about trimming my nose hairs, and frankly, it is a big pain in the butt.

Now I sure as heck don't want my wife running around with long hairs hanging out of her nose like you guys say the French do, but I don't think a couple little strands here and there poking out of a nostril is that disgusting on a man. It's just part of life — especially when you get up in years.

I'm sure there's plenty of guys out there with the same problem. Well, listen up you nagging wives — leave us alone! Can't you see that we're just making an effort to be 'cool' and 'with it?' Nose hair is beautiful. — L. Walburn, Stanton, Calif.

Letter of the Week

DEAR EDITOR, I don't understand why America is so upset about Vice President Dick Cheney (August 2, 2004) telling someone to "F-off."

I mean, in the real world, people curse all time. It's about time these politicians get the ball rolling. I bet a bunch of the other stiffs in Washington will soon follow suit.

There's no way they don't use that kind of language all the time, anyway. With so many different opinions in the country and I don't think anyone else should be either. WHILE millions of Americans would like to see the U.S. Mint put Ronald Reagan on the silver dollar, gay activists are pushing hard for a queer new $3 bill with piano great Liberace's grinning face on the front — and his trademark candelabra on the back!

And instead of "In God We Trust," the money as proposed will say, "Call me Lee!"

Congressional insiders say there's a strong chance that proponents of the very funny money will get what they want because politicians who've been afraid to support gay marriages for fear of losing heterosexual votes don't want to push their luck by snubbing the gay community again.

"Liberace's face on a $3 bill is yummy idea — I love it!" gushes gay activist Phil Renard, of Sacramento, Calif.

"What better ambassador of goodwill for the gay community than a man who bridged the gap between homosexuals and heterosexuals and kept so many gul-

Pres. Bush and his Democratic rival, John Kerry, are doing their best to avoid talking about the new "gay money" to stave off a controversy that could inflame mainstream voters as election day nears.

Privately, both are said to support the creation of the queer new bill if for no other reason than toss

"Liberace was flaming gay before flaming gayness was cool, and make no mistake, it took monumental courage to live as flamboyantly as he did way back when in '50s," says gay New York filmmaker Reg Meida.

"If this new $3 bill becomes a reality, it's going to be great. I can't wait to see the looks on the faces of rednecks and homophobes when some gum-popping clerk hands them one as change.

"And once they put Liberace in their pocket, they'll have to grapple with the fact that one of the gayest gay guys who ever lived has managed to get into their pants — with their blessing."

Opponents of the new bill say guys are barking up the wrong tree if they think putting Liberace on a $3 bill is going to improve relations between homosexuals and straight folks, especially those on the religious right who think being gay is immoral.

DING DONG DAVID

Cleaning snafu leaves statue bare

A MUCH-HERALDED attempt to clean Michelangelo's David with an experimental formula backfired big time when the combination of distilled water, mineral spirits, cellulose pulp and clay caused the statue's genitalia to drop off.

"It was a horrifying moment — the low point of my career," says a female art historian involved in the restoration. "One second, David's manhood was securely attached to the rest of the statue, the next it was in my hand."

A paper mache substitute was hastily crafted and put in place before the public was any the wiser. But experts call that "a stop-gap measure," warning the makeshift wiener could come unglued at any moment.

"That could be quite shocking to visitors," says an usher at the Galleria dell'Accademia in Florence, where the gigantic marble nude is displayed.

The cleaning plan was highly controversial when it was first announced in 2002. Some 50 international scholars warned that the experimental solution had not been sufficiently tested. But officials insisted it was vital to remove the unsightly yellowish beeswax that had accumulated since David was sculpted in 1504, in time for an official unveiling this September.

Red-faced Italian art officials are downplaying the snafu, saying that if all else fails, a metal fig leaf can be placed over the vital area, as was briefly done during more puritanical times.

BUSH CLONE TURNS FOUR

Kid has White House potential, expert says

A CLONE of President George Bush that was created in a top-secret experiment just months before he was elected President in the year 2000 has just celebrated its fourth birthday, and sources say the monkey-eared boy is the spitting image of Dubya in more ways than one.

Not only does young George III look exactly like the President, say the insiders, he also shares his physical, emotional and psychological strengths, weaknesses, quirks and traits, as evidenced by the fact that, just like the commander in chief, he:

● Stammers and stumbles when talking off the cuff, but is smooth in delivering three- and four-word sentence fragments read off the hidden TelePrompTer in his playroom.

● Says "nuke-ular" instead of nuclear and "oyst-cher" instead of oyster and pitches a hissy fit if anybody points it out to him.

● Is hard-headed, makes snap decisions based on little or no evidence and is determined to get his way no matter what.

● Is deeply religious and confused. But he is on a "mission from Jesus" to protect other children from the Devil.

● Is a pathological politician, often playing one doctor off another to get extra snacks, a new toy, or a few extra dollars for a sick friend's piggy bank.

● Answers embarrassing questions by asking another question or veering off-topic and yammering about something unrelated.

● Tells bald-faced "liddle lies" over and over again, apparently believing that if he repeats them often enough, people will believe them.

● Likes to play "fighter pilot" and "National Guard" but often tires of the game and flits off to do something less strenuous and demanding while his playmates clean up the mess.

"He is, in fact, an exact duplicate of the President right down the finest behavioral detail," says a researcher who has been involved in the upbringing of the clone that was created on Aug. 12, 2000, just a few months before Bush finagled his way past Al Gore into the White House.

"The joke around here is that the clone could take over the White House today if, God forbid, something happened to the President.

"And I've got to admit, we probably wouldn't miss a beat. This child has the looks, the genes and more than enough brain-power to sit in for Mr. Bush in the Oval Office."

The White House declines to comment on the clone that was created in a private laboratory with a $4 million grant from the Republican National Committee and is being raised, sources say, "at facilities in Washington, Massachusetts and Texas."

But a senior administration official acknowledges that the President "does occasionally see the boy.

"But it's not like he's a son or anything. The President treats him more like brother.

The legend of the Piano Whisperer

THE legend of the Piano Whisperer is true, says a Florida woman, who admits she was skeptical about the story.

"The Whisperer was handsome with dark hair and blue eyes," says Sadie McElly, 43. "He heard I was in need and came to help me after I was almost killed by my piano. He smiled, and I had sex with him.

"I never believed the fairy tale — a Montana community college music instructor who had the ability to communicate with wild pianos and calm them so players would sound like Chopin.

"They say a woman from New York drove her one-armed daughter to him, hauling their injured and unruly piano behind them. The mother fell for him."

McElly joins hundreds of other needy piano teachers who say the Whisperer gave them a good tuning.

Last week, an investigative reporter from the Florida TV news show Early Bird Special went to the small Western town to find the elusive man behind the myth.

"He's for real," says reporter Joyce Beth Michaels. "I finally tracked him down and convinced him to have sex and tune my piano to prove his legendary abilities."

WHAT HAPPENED TO BRIMBAW, TEXAS?

TWILIGHT ZONE SHOCKER

By KIM SCARBOROUGH

City of 1.2 million vanishes from the face of the earth — & only this man can remember it!

KARL BENNER was "extremely disoriented" and "babbling incoherently" about "a ray of light from the sky" any police.

THE FBI and Department of Homeland Security are looking high and low for Brimbaw, Texas, a once-booming financial center of 1.2 million people that investigators say vanished from the face of the earth on June 17, leaving behind just one man who remembers it.

"This is like something out of the Twilight Zone — and the more I think about it, the weirder it gets," says an FBI agent working the strange case from a field office in Dallas.

"We're talking about a city of over a million people — a huge banking and financial center — gone . . . poof! — just like that.

"And all we've got to go on are the recollections of just one man who is struggling to provide us with details.

"When it comes to hard evidence, there's precious little — but what we do have is intriguing: A brick that apparently is all that's left of the 67-story bank building that anchored Brimbaw's skyline. We've also got a phone book with residential listings for places like Zuchert, Pitone, Mowry and Billy Graham City.

"We don't know what to make of it," adds the source. "It's tough enough finding one missing person, much less a missing city and everybody in it."

The mysterious disappearance of the city that seems to have been situated at an unknown spot west of Dallas came to light when an off-duty Texas Ranger found Karl Benner, 42, stumbling along a rural highway with the brick in one hand and the phone book in the other.

According to the cop, the man was "extremely disoriented" and "babbling incoherently" about "a ray of light from the sky."

Benner's recollections are sketchy at best, continues the FBI source. Psychologists who have examined Benner say he remains in shock and is so traumatizing that his mind has blotted it out.

"He knows he was a banker — he's very clear on that," says the source. "And what's really strange is that he remembers transactions and deals he's made with bankers who are well known in Texas and New York," says the FBI source.

"He knows their business, their habits, their quirks. He also knows intimate details about their personal lives that only a good friend and confidante would know. But guess what? They've never heard of Benner.

"Now that's bizarre."

The Department of Homeland Security is helping to investigate the case because the disappearance of a city, in the words of an insider, "has national security implications, especially if terrorists had anything to do

"Physicists tell us there's a possibility Benner might have arrived in our world from a parallel universe where a city by the name of Brimbaw, Texas, exists alongside towns like Dallas and Houston, which also show up in our world.

"We need to calm Benner down and start getting answers to every question we can think to ask.

"Of course, if Brimbaw didn't just exist in a parallel world, if it did exist here and we just can't remember it because someone or something blotted it from our memory, it may be too late.

"Something we can't see and don't understand may already be at work, undermining our reality and altering our minds. And if that's the

Osama's favorite curses

SLIPPERY terrorist kingpin Osama Bin Laden is infamous for his vicious anti-American rants — but cohorts say he reserves his harshest tongue-lashings for his own underlings!

"Osama has a reputation for expressing himself in very colorful language when angry," reveals British counterterrorism Trevor Northwake.

"Some of his insults are drawn from traditional Arab curses and date back thousands of years. Others are a product of his own warped mind or a hodgepodge of both."

Northwake, who obtained special access to transcripts of British intelligence interrogations of Al Qaeda suspects, was struck by how often the prisoners quoted Bin Laden as cheering them out inventively — and so he's compiled an impressive list of 284 Osama curses.

"Some of these one-liners are so nutty that you just have to forget for a minute that this is the most evil man alive and have a good laugh," the London-based expert says.

Here are hot-tempered Osama's favorite insults:

● May the fleas of 10,000 camels make their nest in your impotent crotch.

● I wish that on the night you were conceived your father had gone to the mosque instead, you cowardly jackal.

● The sight of you offends me — you resemble a pig with an ugly toupee.

● Your father must have been drunk when he mounted the cow that bore you.

● The stench of your body is deeply offensive — you smell like the bottom of George Bush's cowboy boots.

● You are as wise as a baboon born without a head.

● May your mother's accursed lust crack (sex organ) burn forever in the fires of Hell for the crime of bringing you into this world.

● Your foul breath is like that of a male prostitute who services the rotting corpses of lepers.

● I admire you as much as I admire a dead, maggot-infested pig lying in the road, you son of a prostitute.

● May your grandmother's withered jugs strike her ankles as she belly-dances for Colin Powell.

● May a sandstorm fill your buttocks so voluminously you stink and excite each time you evacuate your bowels, you jabbering lycan.

● May every waterhole you drink from be filled with tapeworms.

● What shall I give your son for his bar mitzvah?

● I will blister your ears with my sandals, you blood-sucking lout.

● Condoleezza Rice leads your father by a leash and punishes you on the head with a newspaper, you hairy dog.

● Your wicked mother was stoned to death for adultery; your brothers have no hands — may your sons all become eunuchs and your daughters marry infidels.

● May you give birth to a full-grown rhinoceros through your alimentary canal.

SPACE ALIEN SPOTTED

By MIKE FOSTER

HISTORIC HUG: Sen. John Kerry rushes up to mysterious extraterrestrial P'Lod.

PRESIDENTIAL contender John Kerry has been actively courting the famed Washington space alien P'Lod — and cornered the E.T. at the Democratic National Convention to plead for his endorsement!

That's the startling assertion of a campaign insider, who backs up the claim with a snapshot of the Massachusetts senator awkwardly embracing the mysterious spaceman.

The historic hug reportedly took place July 29, just prior to Kerry's momentous speech.

"Sen. Kerry quietly slipped aside for a quick rendezvous with the alien," reveals the Kerry campaign insider.

"Sen. Kerry pulled out all the stops — he used every ounce of charisma in his body to try to win over P'Lod.

"Unfortunately, the alien is still sitting on the fence. He politely said he 'isn't ready to commit to either candidate.'"

P'Lod's endorsement is considered more key than that of any union or newspaper in the country. Political analysts contend that the strange visitor's backing of Bill Clinton in 1992 and George W. Bush in 2000 helped determine the outcome of those elections.

"The conventional wisdom in this

THE WORLD'S SICKEST JOKES

ANOTHER of four has launched a one-woman crusade against something she feels is doing tremendous damage to society — the world's sickest jokes.

"These horrible, awful, insulting, degrading jokes and riddles are simply a cultural cancer afflicting this nation," states Judith O'Rourke, 42, from her home just outside Topeka, Kan.

And they're everywhere — on Web sites, postcards, T-shirts, movies, on radio and TV, at parties. "It often feels like a tasteless joke campaign-cy!"

"If making fun of people's religion, physical afflictions, and psychological illnesses is supposed to be amusing, well, I guess I must have missed the humor boat," observes O'Rourke, who closely monitors what her children watch, read and listen to and has launched an aggressive letter-writing campaign.

"I'm contacting the heads of corporations urging them to withdraw their advertising from any media that traffics in this filth. Why should my family's hard-earned dollars support organizations that promote this kind of trash?"

O'Rourke has provided Weekly World News with several examples of the kind of humor she finds far from

Abu Ghraib Pictures to Get Own Awards Ceremony

By DEBBIE FANATIA

FRENCH movie-arts power hitters are so impressed by images from Iraq's Abu Ghraib prison that they plan to give those responsible the Dernier D'or, the annual award for the most artistic naked butt in photography or film.

"We are amazed by the range of emotion captured by the images," panel chairman Pierre Petard says.

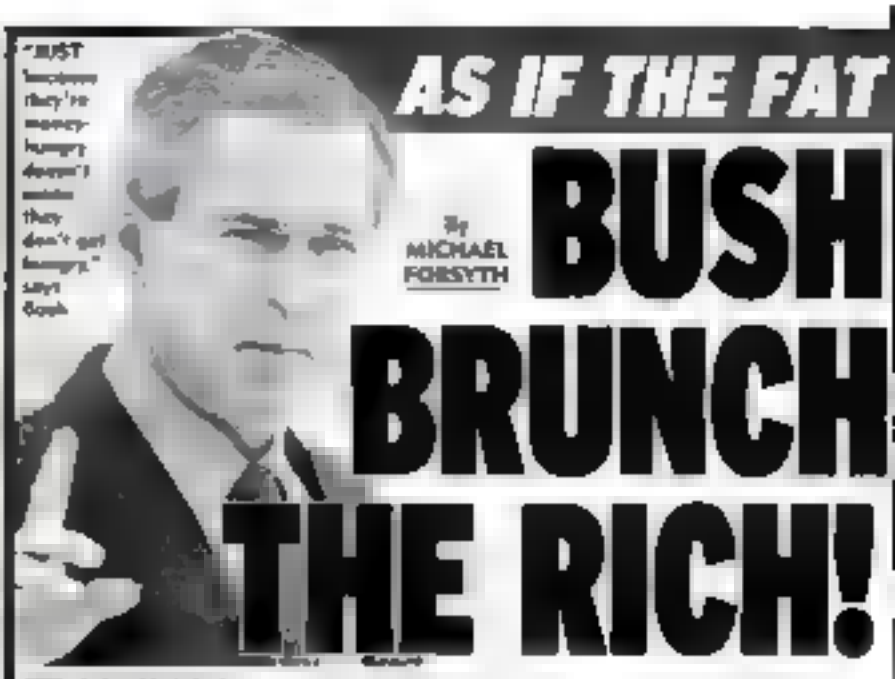
"Some captured the light perfectly, and the glints and gleams of sweat glistening from the prominently displayed posteriors of the naked prisoners fairly sparkle in some of the images as if they'd hung a disco ball from the ceiling," says Petard. "It's a remarkable achievement."

The ceremony promises to deliver all the glitz and glamour of the Oscars, since the Dernier D'or is the premier award in the French art world. Petard says his panel is pleased to give the award to Americans "who found beauty in an unlikely place, just as a Frenchman would."

Attire will be black-tie, but in keeping with the theme of the event, pants are optional.

The "artists" couldn't be reached for comment.

AS IF THE FAT BUSH BRUNCH THE RICH!



By MICHAEL FORSYTH

PRESIDENT BUSH is reportedly set to propose a new initiative that wealthy tycoons can really sink their teeth into: A free brunch program for the super-rich!

"In bringing America's movers and shakers together at Freedom Breakfasts, we'll give them a unique forum in which to brainstorm and hatch new business ventures," explains a senior administration source.

The plan calls for the weekly brunches featuring top of the line gourmet food to be held at luxurious hotel restaurants around the country.

Even though the pilot panel won't be formally introduced for at least three weeks, Democrats have been quick to ridicule it.

"Now they talk about giving away free caviar, foie gras, smoked salmon and white truffles to fat cats who could well afford to pay for it themselves.

"It's outrageous."

Due to the high price of gourmet treats, the brunches will cost taxpayers an estimated $8 billion a year, according to a not-yet released study conducted by the GAO, the bean-counters for Congress. That will "needlessly balloon" the federal budget deficit, which is already predicted to hit a record high this year, critics argue.

"There's no such thing as a free brunch," the Democrat blasts.

Republicans angrily dismiss such talk.

"Typical Democrats — always engaging in class warfare," responds a conservative GOP senator. "If something is good for the business community of this nation, knee-jerk liberals always reject it."

Economist Stanley Greenstad of New York City calls the idea "quite innovative" and compliments the president for ignoring left leaning naysayers.

"These brunches would provide a wonderful environment for networking," he points out. "That could encourage exactly the kind of synergy our economy needs right now.

"And if nothing else, the brunches will certainly give a huge boost to the catering industry."

By and large, corporate America backs the free-brunch proposal, many CEOs eagerly anticipating the chance to brush shoulders with the most famous names in big business.

My America

BY ED ANGER

As summer blockbuster 'I, Robot' warns of technology run amok, Ed says ...

WILL SMITH IS FULL OF BEANS

AMERICA NEEDS MORE ROBOTS!

I'M MADDER than the Frankenstein monster with rusty neck bolts at this stupid new Will Smith movie I, Robot, warning about how in the near future America will be overrun by robots ■■ing to take over the world!

Folks, the truth is America needs MORE robots, not less — and I predict that by 2035, the big problem Uncle Sam will be facing is a robot SHORTAGE.

When I was a boy, all the comic books, radio shows and dime novels promised us that in the 21st century, we'd have robots to do our housework, mow the lawn and handle all the other chores we hate. Well, the year 2000 has come and gone ■■■, there's hardly a robot in sight. Heck, I even have to pump my own gas nowadays — which is WORSE than back in the 1960s, when at least some skinny mopping the floor, vacuuming, dusting my fishing trophies and plunging the toilet are a waste of time for a human — it's a pity my wife Thelma Jean has to do them at her age.

As for mowing the lawn, that's man work, so I have my Weekly World News summer intern take care of that. But the young whip permanent creases from some big city where no one has a front yard and I have to keep coming out to show him how to work the goldarned lawnmower.

A handy-dandy robot could get that job done in a jiffy — without plowing through the flower garden.

Never did ■■■■■■■■ for that fella Will Smith. When he first came out with that rap garbage, my daughter Sarah Lee spent all day shaking her big caboose around the house singing, "Can't Touch This."

But the last straw came when he stooped to playing that draft-dodging traitor Cassius Clay in the movies. It'll be a cold day in Hell before I go along with that "Muhammad Ali" baloney.

Now I don't plan on watching this I, Robot ■■■■■■■■

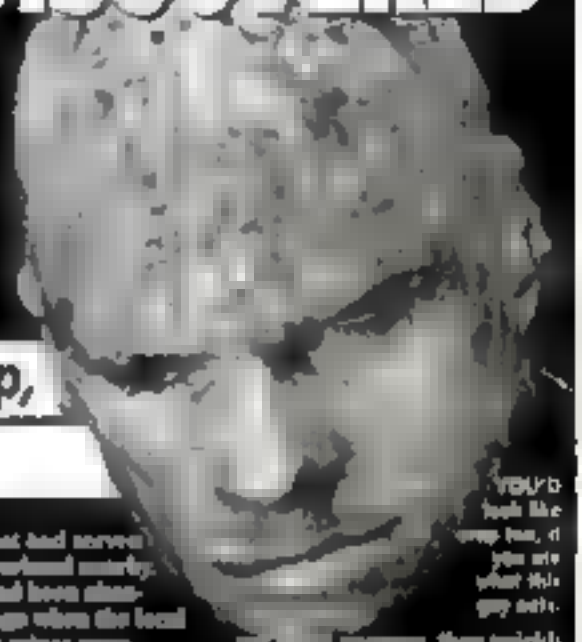
RACE OF PEOPLE DISCOVERED IN SEPTIC TANKS!



By Micky Tosh

They live on human poop, say disgusted scientists!

AN AUSTRALIAN environmentalist studying pollutants in the Outback accidentally discovered a race of people living beneath the earth's surface in septic tanks.

Dr. Grace Jones quickly assembled a team of experts who will be rushed to "Underground Zero" by helicopter.

"The beings are not completely human," Jones told the group of eager scientists, which includes paleontologists, geologists and anthropologists. "They're grotesque creatures with pale skin, sunken black eyes and deformed bodies with uneven limbs that cause them to limp and crawl about. I believe they evolved and subsisted from living microorganisms that remain in on-site sewage disposal systems that aren't pumped properly.

"Regardless of their horrifying appearance, they've formed a language and society of their own completely underground. They take their nutrition from the sludge, urine and excrement of the septic tanks from which they spring, and travel freely without detection through a vast system of tunnels."

Professor Jones — who teaches classes in Prehistoric Study at Outback University (OU) — and her assistant were in the field collecting ancient Aboriginal litter when they heard a strange sound.

"I could have sworn it was a crying baby," recalls Dr. Kate Rogers, who recently earned her Ph. D. in Prehistoric Studies and works with Jones at OU.

"It was coming from beneath us. When it didn't stop, we decided to investigate."

The women had already noticed the exposed hatch of a septic tank that had served nearly eight hundred people. The homes had been abandoned years ago when the local water division which was supplied of their clean water.

"We raced back to the Land Rover and donned masks and biohazard suits," says Jones.

"Decomposing wastes in the septic tank produce many gases, which can kill a human in a matter of minutes."

Jones and Rogers rushed upon the iron hatch, shocked by the sight of possible fecal specimens below the surface. Quickly, they dropped the hatch on Jones' foot.

"I screamed in agony, but quickly pumped down into the septic tank with Dr. Rogers close behind," she says. "We pursued the little beasts until they were trapped.

"When it was clear to them we weren't going to leave without a fight, they dropped their weapons and surrendered. Once we were sure they were unarmed, we brought them to the surface."

ARE YOU KNOWING?

In order to keep these organisms from evolving into intelligent beings in YOUR septic tank, experts recommend the tank should be inspected and pumped every one to two years

"You'd look like one too, if you ate what they eat," Jones answers, they quickly settled down."

The Sewage People, as they call themselves, explained their subterranean existence through a series of gestures and tongue clicks. They even brought out food for their new friends.

"Oh my God," says Rogers. "When they put that shoveler pile of poop and rags of urine in front of us, it was all I could do not to upchuck. We politely refused their meal and then took our leave before we could offend them."

The duo told The Sewage People they would be back.

"I hope they understood," says Jones. "I can't wait for my colleagues to meet them. We explained about the food problem, and one of our biologists said 'Hey, if we have to eat s#!%@, we have to eat s#!%@. It's all in the name of science.'"

Turbocharged golf carts menace retirement communities

IN AN ALARMING new fad, seniors in souped-up golf carts are zipping around their previously quiet retirement communities at speeds exceeding 50 miles per hour and raising holy hack.

The trend has caught on nationwide, and some residents have even set up clubs that revolve around the latest golf-cart performance technology.

Many residents have complained to Florida resident. "My neighbor has one that'll take nine, but he hasn't worked up the nerve to look it up yet. One of these days, someone is going to kill somebody with one."

He reports that several small dogs have been run over. "Two can't run in the retirement home that enough sometimes."

There have been reports of accidents, some severe, and several homeowners' associations across the country have had to ban golf carts altogether. "There are guys who can't pass the eye test for a driver's license, so sometimes they're a bit dicey than they think."

Turbo-cart owners maintain that their modified carts are safe, as they're fitted with fog lights, halogen headlights, disk brakes, horns, seat belts and small rubber tires. "We're street legal, and there are [illegible]

Robber got caught up in his work!

A DRUNKEN man began his day in one of the worst ways imaginable — handcuffed — after being found passed out in the liquor store he had meant to rob.

Thomas Hardish, owner of Tom's Liquors near Baltimore, Md., says he found the man lying unconscious on the floor surrounded by several half-empty bottles of whiskey and some others.

"I guess he couldn't make up his mind," says Hardish. "It looked like he made himself a little alcoholic buffet — Crown and Coke, Bloody Mary, 7 and 7 ..."

The detective involved in the investigation says the would-be thief entered the liquor store by smashing a side window. When the alarm failed to sound, the robber figured he was home free and could take his time with the liquor inside.

"Heck, Jim and Jane must have been talking to him while he was in there, because he couldn't even walk or get out before he started passing — he just sat right down in aisle 2 and proceeded to get absolutely blitzed," says the detective.

The store's alarm may not have gone off, but hidden security cameras caught the inebriated crook's entire episode. The detective says the man did not appear to be under the influence when he first broke in, but after a few "trips to the back" he started to sway a little and trip over his own feet.

"I'm no expert, but I'll go ahead and say this man couldn't handle his liquor," says the detective.

As the store owner, Hardish was one of the first to see the video and says he can't believe anyone would be so dumb.

"I can understand needing a drink — who wouldn't do after your nerves during a robbery?" he says. "But to play dress and drink yourself into a stupor obvious to just anyone. That dummy deserved to get caught."

The detective agrees and says he hopes the man "had himself a good time because that's all he had coming for a while."

THAT SUCKS!

A PENNSYLVANIA MAN has been jailed after sneaking up and reportedly sucking the neck of three unsuspecting women.

The man, whose assaults were apparently unprovoked, has been identified in a photo lineup by several women, one of whom says she was taking a nap in the park when she was suddenly awakened by a man licking her face.

"Before she realized what was actually going on," says a local lawman, "he was sucking her toes."

Outraged the victim's husband says, "I don't even do that!"

A DETROIT man was arrested last week after asking a neighbor to help him pick up a heavy garbage bag — which promptly split, revealing a corpse.

That's when he decided to ask for help from a neighbor who was mowing his lawn next door.

"The two men were going the bag the old fashioned way — they grabbed the bottom and top and lifted it up," says the cop.

Not wanting to be any part of helping out a body, the neighbor refused and called police.

Officers arrived on the scene and found the man sitting on the curb with his head in his hands, trying to get rid of the gruesome memories of what he'd seen.

EGOMANIAC LAWYER MARRIES HIMSELF!

By MIKE FOSTER

EGOTISTICAL lawyer Brian Donnell unabashedly admits he's head-over-heels in love with himself — and to prove his commitment, he married himself in a formal church ceremony!

Donnell, 31, was both bride and groom when he tied the knot in front of 150 guests at St. Matthew's Church in Brisbane, Australia on July 11.

"Brian walked down the aisle by himself, vowed to be faithful to himself and sealed the deal by placing a ring on his own finger," says cousin Lorraine Kelly, who witnessed the solo nuptials.

"He was 100 percent serious. When the minister asked if he promised to 'have and hold' himself, for richer and poorer and all that, he said 'I do' in a loud, clear voice.

"Then he gave such a joyful grin you could tell he was the happiest man on the planet.

"Until then, a lot of us thought the whole thing was nutty, but at that moment I realized it was the right thing for him. Some relatives were so touched, they cried."

Donnell kissed plenty of frogs over the years before discovering he was Mr. Right.

"I've been in loads of relationships, but no woman ever seemed to be the right match," the handsome attorney reveals.

NO BRIDE, NO PROBLEM — Self-obsessed Brian Donnell, seen here at his solo wedding reception, had a cake decorated with only a single male figure on top.

HE MADE ONE HELL OF A PRE-NUP!

"It finally dawned on me that I'd already met the perfect partner. Someone who shares my tastes in food, music and entertainment. Someone who'd never leave me to go on a skiing vacation without me. Someone who'd look after me in sickness and in health. I loved with all my heart — myself.

So I bought myself a $2500 diamond engagement ring and began planning my special day.

Finding a preacher to go along with the single-spouse marital scheme wasn't easy. But after many meetings, Reverend Hollis Rampling agreed to bind Donnell in holy matrimony to himself.

"Normally, the church defines marriage as a sacred union between a man and woman," explains Rev. Rampling, who has a degree in psychology.

"But Brian is clearly a narcissistic personality type and that's not going to change. I decided that if this is what he truly wanted, I couldn't stand in his way."

Getting family members to accept the unorthodox marriage was more difficult. Much to Donnell's chagrin, his parents argued that they were the parents of the bride.

"Brian's dad also refused to give him away, so Brian did that himself," says cousin Lorraine. "Because he's also his own closest friend, he was the best man too."

At the reception, the blushing bride-groom cut a cake with a single tuxedoed figure on top, gave a toast to his own future happiness and danced the first waltz of the evening alone.

The self-centered legal eagle enjoyed a two-week honeymoon in Hawaii.

"When I checked in and said I'd reserved the honeymoon suite, the hotel manager kept looking around for the bride," Donnell says.

MUSLIM DOGS MUST WEAR BURQAS

By SCOTT STEVENS

AS IF it isn't bad enough that [illegible] Muslim women in the Middle East are forced to wear burqas — now a new edict holds female dogs must wear them, too.

"Muslim men get upset watching male dogs sniffing female and then mounting them in public," says Omar Assad, a Muslim sociologist. "They found it indecent. The dog burqa was their solution."

The stylish burqas — called hijabs — cover everything but the animal's eyes and nose.

Women in Muslim countries are required to wear burqas so that men don't become aroused by seeing them.

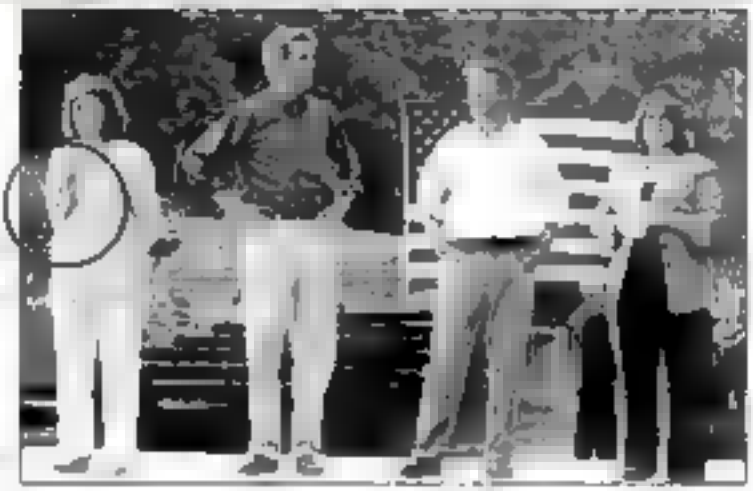
"In a society where even a woman's ankle is enough to trigger an uproar, that she's being suggestive, it's not allowed to say that the sight of dogs going at it like rabbits can have a similar effect," says Assad.

"Quite frankly, I think some of the men were jealous that male dogs were having more fun than they were."

Many moderate Muslims have protested the pet burqas. "It makes us look ridiculous," says Mohammed Qasim, a student, who owns a female collie. "Also, it makes it difficult to recognize our dogs. And tell the truth, they end up rolling the burqa. It's a mess."

KETCHUP STAIN SMEARS KERRY CAMPAIGN

Heinz heiress wife blames John Edwards



By WILLIAM PEEL

FIRST LADY wanna-be and multimillionaire condiment heiress Teresa Heinz Kerry deeply offends ordinary people with her high-handed ways. But the snooty lady got her comeuppance when an alert photographer snapped her picture — with a big blob of ketchup on her blouse!

"How did this get on me? I wasn't [illegible] ketchup! Somebody must have [illegible]" she stammered and mumbled in the annoying mouthful [illegible] style that's rapidly [illegible] her trademark.

"[illegible] John Edwards? That idiot! He eats hotdogs! Maybe he spilled it on me! Is he aware that I speak five languages?"

"I think I'm going to faint!"

The bizarre scene unfolded after a $25-a-plate fund-raiser for blue collar workers in Cleveland — a fund-raiser that Heinz Kerry reportedly begged her Democratic presidential hopeful hubby, Sen. John Kerry, not to make her attend.

"She had a premonition that something bad would happen," says a Kerry campaign worker. "She said anytime you hang out with riff raff you've got to expect trouble.

"And then lo and behold, this happens. When she started whining, I could see John get a sour look on his face, like he was getting physically ill.

"He tried to wipe off the ketchup with the end of his tie, but as usual she turned her head and pushed him away like he had bad breath.

"Finally, a few of her aides realized what was happening and they rushed over to shield her from photographers.

"Then they hustled her to a waiting limo and back to her five-star hotel for a hot bath, a bottle of champagne, a shiatsu massage and a complete change of clothes."

Heinz — who only added "Kerry" to her name a few months ago to keep from offending voters — is widely considered to be a liability in Kerry's race for the presidency.

Pundits have called her everything from "creepy" and "weird" to "a pea-brained idiot."

"Some people cut Teresa a little of slack because she inherited [illegible] million from ketchup king John Heinz when he [illegible] in [illegible] crash back in 1991, and they're in [illegible] wealth," says [illegible] National Committee [illegible].

"[illegible] smart enough, but she's a loose cannon. You never know what's going to come out of her mouth. The first thing she said after her husband named John Edwards as his vice presidential candidate was, 'He's a very pretty boy, but my husband is smart.'

"Not to burst her bubble, but I've seen polls that show voters think Edwards is smarter than Sen. Kerry and 'Miss High and Mighty' put together."

Study reveals: Scientists still giggle every time they say 'Uranus'

A STUDY conducted by the prestigious New England Journal of Astronomy reveals that scientists can't stop chuckling when they say "Uranus."

The problem has become so bad that some scientists have actually suggested changing Uranus' name.

My gassy hubby's toots are destroying our happy home

DEAR DOTTI: My idiot husband loves beans and [illegible] them all the time because they work bet-[illegible] than Viagra on his sex drive, which is high anyway.

Unfortunately, they also make him gassy as all get out. But his toots aren't like yours or mine. When he breaks wind it's not just thunderous, the odor is bad enough to peel the paint off the wall. He's ruining our home, Dotti, because the smell gets in the carpet, the curtains, the silk flowers on his [illegible] stand — everything!

I've begged him to switch to a normal diet, but he wants beans every day. What would you do if you were in my shoes? — Desperate in Penobscot, Maine

Dear Desperate: Cut off the idiot's beans until he sees the light. If he's anything [illegible] my [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] his booty [illegible] [illegible] a walk as out.

Is it safe to date the seat mate I found on the Internet?

Dear Dotti: I met a wonderful man on the Internet. He's [illegible] loving, sincere, strong, compassionate, caring — everything you'd want in [illegible]. He's also the CEO of a major [illegible]. It's a [illegible] I [illegible]ped [illegible] him in one of those "[illegible] But Looking" chat rooms where single people who are too embarrassed to say they are single go when they're hoping to find a companion.

Anyway, "HotRod4U2_1997" asked me to let him come to my apartment so we can make [illegible] [illegible] to know each other. I feel comfortable giving him my address, but my friends say you never should tell people on the Internet [illegible] you [illegible] because they [illegible] be killers or rapists.

[illegible] do you think, Dotti? I feel like I can trust HotRod4U2_1997 with my life, but I'd like your opinion. Do you think my digital Prince Charming is trustworthy — or trouble? At the age of 51, I can't afford too many mishaps. I've [illegible] to [illegible] every [illegible] count. — Unsure in Denver, Colo.

Dear Unsure: People shouldn't be allowed to look for love on the Internet unless and until they pass a test that proves they've got at least two digits in their IQ. Your Prince Charming [illegible] [illegible] trouble, pronto! — he's 12. That "1997" [illegible] on to [illegible] end of his e-mail address is probably the year he was born.

I'm tired of waiting in line to make love to my wife

Dear Dotti: It seems like every time I want to [illegible] my wife, there's someone in line ahead of me. I know I agreed to an open marriage, but this is ridiculous.

Just yesterday there were three guys sitting in my living room when I got home from work and they were all waiting to use Mary. By the [illegible] my turn rolled around, she was too tired to even give me a hug. I love my wife and I want to hold her and cuddle, Dotti. Any advice on how I can make that happen? — Crestfallen in Taylorsville, Ind.

Dear Crestfallen: Have you tried offering her a $20?

Send Dotti your letters and your [illegible] — and let her tell it like it

Love tips for the over-the-hill gang ...

THE JOY OF GERIATRIC SEX

By SALLY PENNER

YOU CAN KEEP the fires of love alive no matter how old, cranky and wrinkly you are with fabulous new intimacy tips for geezers only!

"Just because you're a bag of bones with a face like an [illegible] the shoe doesn't mean you have to give up on romance," says Dr Sheila Marsha, a geriatric [illegible] from West Palm Beach, Fla.

"It [illegible] that you're over the hill — but so are your potential lovers. So that means you still can score if you keep your expectations low and accept the fact that the cute little forty-something's you fantasize about are young enough to be your grandchildren."

How to keep the fires of love alive in your 80s, 90s — and beyond!

Here are Dr Marsha's tips for "getting it on" in your golden years. If you have a [illegible] high blood pressure, you might want a younger, healthier friend or grandchild to read the tips for you, and then tell you about them later [illegible] you calm down:

1. Allow yourself plenty of time to get in the mood and ready for action. If you think you're up for a "quickie" at your age, you're dreaming!

2. Don't be picky. The old sayings "Beggars can't be choosers" and "Don't look a gift horse in the mouth" hold true with geezer love. Take what you can get and be grateful for it — regardless of [illegible] shape your sweetie is in!

3. Limit your love sessions to dark rooms to avoid confronting the harsh reality that your lover is as wrinkled and saggy as you are. A candle is O.K. if it's small and you put it clear across the room!

4. Denture [illegible], be creative! The fact that you can remove your teeth from your mouth should suggest all kinds of erotic possibilities that are lost to others.

"One look at what you're up to might very well make you [illegible] ill," says the psychol- [illegible]. "And I can't think of a [illegible] 'turn off' than getting [illegible] in bed!"

LOTTERY WINNER PLUCKED CLEAN – AFTER BLOWING FORTUNE ON MORE TICKETS!

By SCOTT STEVENS

A MAN who won $2 million playing the lottery has lost his fortune — buying more lottery tickets. And now the man is poorer than ever.

Evan Greer, 55, came into his fortune three years ago when he bought a scratch-off ticket on a lark. "I bought maybe three [illegible] was, I thought, 'This is easy!' I mean, it sure beat plucking chickens, which is what I was doing for money."

Greer quit his job, and bought as many lottery tickets as he could. "I spent the whole day scratching cards," Greer says. "You might say I went from plucking to scratchin'."

Soon Greer's fortune began dwindling, but he couldn't stop. [illegible] tried to get Greer to curb his habit, but he didn't listen to them.

"I honestly thought lottery tickets were a good investment," he says.

Now the former plucker has gone through his entire fortune — and his former job at the chicken plucking plant has been outsourced. To top it off, all that rubbing left him with carpal tun-

MARTHA CREATES STEPFORD CLONE!

Domestic diva lives it up while double goes to jail

SEND in the clone!

Martha Stewart [illegible] a $5M robotic clone up-and-running and ready to serve her five [illegible] sentence while she [illegible] out — feasting on chocolate-covered bonbons and [illegible] the techno breakthrough that made it possible.

Forget about those skeletal clunkers [illegible] the [illegible]. Robot Martha's genetically engineered double [illegible] her own DNA as the chemical [illegible] charging its molecule-size nanobots and is programmed to respond like one of The Stepford Wives.

Indistinguishable [illegible] the real guru of good taste [illegible] called "Mar-bot" by its British creators. Martha's clone is built to meekly obey prison guards — and more. It will also submissively accept the physical attentions of other female inmates.

"We had to consider every possibility and [illegible] ingly," says Prof. [illegible] F. Braithwaite, formerly with the Center for Virtual [illegible] in the U.K., who was hired by Stewart soon after the June 2003 indictments were handed down.

"Mar-bot can handle [illegible] manual labor, a full scale riot — even a 'girls only' cell party that [illegible] a little too cozy for comfort, if you get my drift. It's perfect.

THE MAR-BOT can handle built with tomorrow's technology and Martha's own DNA.

"Mar-bot [illegible] the real Martha. It's non-confrontational, [illegible] programmed to greet downward [illegible] look that's right for prison. Say to Mar-bot, 'How are you?' [illegible] smile, then sweetly reply, 'Oh fine, thank you.'"

ARE YOU LOADED?

Illegal possession of an Internet modem in the country of Sarnia can lead to a prison term

Braithwaite and her team worked for over a year, only occasionally leaving the garage-laboratory of Stewart's New York Hamptons home. In town they [illegible] and impersonated migrant workers on their break from toiling on her lawns and gardens.

He is particularly pleased at perfecting Martha's famous "scowl of disapproval" which he says was achieved by hot wiring "literally hours upon hours" of video of her facial expressions to a hologram which was then synchronized with the robotic mainframe.

Another innovation: Martha's single raised eyebrow expression which Mar-bot copies with such dramatic effect that Braithwaite says even he was made to feel his last statement to her was the most idiotic thing ever uttered by anyone, living or dead.

Not that the construction of Martha's robot went entirely without a hitch. In March, around the time that the domestic diva stepped down from [illegible] board of her company, a [illegible] rap amok, [illegible] and destroying prized chinaware in her kitchen.

A much improved later version [illegible] passed its test run at East Hampton's Kmart outlet. [illegible] brand towels and [illegible] threatening to have store staffers "fired and/or [illegible] for wasting valuable [illegible] Martha's own.

[illegible], which [illegible] passed with [illegible], [illegible] bot Martha's own [illegible] Alexis [illegible] ally [illegible] her closet room [illegible] a shopping list of personal items she may [illegible] take to [illegible].

"When Alexis said, 'That's a lot of [illegible]-covered [illegible],' I knew our work here was done. I'm not boasting when I say that neither the prison doctor or the smartest cell block sugar Mamas will know a robot is serving Martha's time," says Braithwaite.

Stewart still hopes her appeal will keep her out of prison, but in the worst-case scenario, Mar-bot is ready. Her immediate problem [illegible] become where to hide, and how to dispose of Mar-bot after it has done its job.

Though any one of her five homes would make [illegible] hiding place, wily Martha's contingency plan is as inspired as sending in a clone to serve her sentence. If Mar-bot is called to action, Braithwaite says Stewart is [illegible] in the Appalachian chain with every [illegible] luxury — satellite dish TV, [illegible] of Chardonnay, a PC that logs on to the Internet under another name, [illegible] to Shakespeare, [illegible] lots of her favorite candy.

"She says she's particularly enchanted by Brach's chocolate-covered bonbons and has them stacked by the loo/pal next to the [illegible]." [illegible] for the fate of [illegible] Mar-bot, Braithwaite says Martha's [illegible] is already hardened.

"[illegible] urging her to keep Mar-bot low down the line, to attend boring charity events and business meetings," says Braithwaite. "Considering the literally billions of accelerations [illegible] moments of [illegible] that went into this breakthrough technology, it's a gem.

"But Martha could care less. She says she's going to shut off Mar-bot's power source, weigh it down with some really heavy chains and drop it off a boat out in Hampton's Bay without as much as a goodbye or thank you very much."

Though Stewart gave the Braithwaite team a free hand in the construction of her clone which he says cost her a cool $13M, she put her foot down [illegible], made them erase one sentence of speech which was originally part of Mar-bot's 1.6 million noise ordinance — by burping

A NORTHERN California [redacted] with an [redacted], Edward "Big Ed" Furrier has been [redacted] violating the community's noise ordinance for the 37th time — for burping.

Town spokesperson Veronica Dandridge reports they have previously spoken at length with Mr. Furrier about his belching habits. Says Dandridge: "We are sympathetic to his medical condition but people have a right to safety, security and sleep. His repetitions are disturbing."

But Furrier claims he has no medical condition.

"I have gas," says Furrier. "I burp. It's natural. Are you telling me Mexican doctor's burp?"

Neighbors are not forgiving.

"I haven't had a decent night sleep since this started," says a woman on Furrier's street who wishes to remain anonymous. "My bed shakes like a train going by. I thought it was a low flying jet the first time I heard him. It knocked plaster off my walls."

Another victim of Ed's gaseous explosions says: "Barking dogs, loud radios, even gunfire don't bother me none, but that burping! My bowling trophy fell off the mantel and hit my wife on the head."

Ed's eruptions are so intense seismographs at Cal State Fullerton have falsely registered five pit blasts.

The signs were first placed along the Olt Valley Road, which runs through the center of Romania, and are gradually being rolled out nationwide, according to the daily Evenimentul Zilei newspaper.

Adding fuel to the controversy, Romanian pimps have recognized the potential of the "[redacted]" gimmick and have gotten into the act by putting up their own, unauthorized signs.

Though almost identical to the police signs, they are more explicit — showing the particular specialty of the working girl on that street.

Hookers got their title during the Civil War when General Joseph Hooker, of the Union Army, tried to boost morale by allowing prostitutes access to his troops. Quickly dubbed "Hooker's girls," the prostitutes shortened it to "hookers." The name stuck.

Russian space dog buried bones on Mars!

NASA's Spirit rover on Mars has uncovered bones, buried by a Russian space dog.

An anonymous NASA source says: "We'd heard stories of a Russian rover but we thought it was mechanical, not a real dog!"

The NASA source claims the canine Martian explorer is "shocking but not surprising." "The Russians always send a dog first. They may not have meant to send him to Mars, but there he is."

The bones were excavated by the Spirit rover while searching for signs of life in the Martian soil. Scientists now realize that many of the Martian craters are not from meteor impacts but are the work of a four-legged terrestrial canine.

Spirit's wide spectrum camera has had fleeting glimpses of the playful pooch.

"He's frisky," says the NASA source. "Always wants to play with Spirit — he thinks it's a toy. They may be an opportunity for international goodwill, but we've got work to do. The dog's mutt has been chewing on our high gain antenna."

NASA is considering raising the matter with the UN Committee For Planetary Protection. According to the NASA source, "Unfortunately, grabbing and saying 'Bad Dog' doesn't really work from 35 million miles away."

BORDER PATROLS HELPLESS TO

MEXICANS USE GIANT SLINGSHOT TO SNEAK INTO U.S.

MEXICAN illegal aliens are now entering the United States by flying — but they're not taking airplanes, they're being flung over the border courtesy of giant slingshots, and U.S. immigration officials admit there's nothing they can do to stop it.

"We're stymied," says Roy Attendorough, a top U.S. Customs official.

Mexicans who want to enter the U.S. illegally have either had to sneak through border crossings, or take long and dangerous journeys traversing desert and wilderness. The giant slingshot, set up about 200 yards from the U.S. border, sends them flying into Texas, where they land — usually — on giant mattresses.

The "slingbacks," as they're called, are then brought to nearby farms where they work.

In addition to being quicker and safer, Mexicans are finding that coming into the country via slingshot has another advantage. "It's fun!" says a man who recently took the trip.

"Some of the illegal aliens even say they want to get back to Mexico so they can ride the slingshot again!" says Immigration official the trip coordinators, who declined to give his last name.

"We discourage them from unnecessarily repeating the trip," he says.

But U.S. immigration officials think it's anything but fun.

"It's an impossible situation," says Attenborough. "The first time I encountered this, I was standing on the border, and suddenly I heard this loud cry of 'Ayy Caramba!' over my head. I looked up and this guy was flying through the air, holding on to his baseball cap.

"A minute later, I saw two big duffel bags following him."

Customs agents are at a loss.

"The only way to stop them is to shoot them out of the sky," says Attenborough. "And we obviously can't do that, for political reasons."

Lately there's been a new innovation -- rather sizable flying together.

"They bundle up to four people into a 'family pack' and they all hurtle over crying 'Ayy Caramboooza!' together," says Attenborough.

Ironically, the sling shot service began because it was getting more difficult to get into the U.S. by other means.

The slingshots are mounted on wheels so that they can be set up from different remote locations all the time, confounding U.S. Customs officials who can't predict where the immigrants will land. The slingshot operators communicate with the men in charge of the giant rubberbands — which are also mounted on wheels — via walkie-talkie so that they can stay ahead of customs officials.

"It's very sophisticated," says Attenborough.

. . . THEY HIT THE GROUND & START RUNNING . . .

The new transportation system is not without its dangers. In three instances the two sides didn't communicate properly, and the Mexicans landed on hard ground.

"It's a new technology," Jorge says. "When airplanes were first invented, they crashed a lot, too."

Still, many Mexicans are willing to take the risk. "Besides," says a recent arrival, "it's a great way to see the country."

WHAT A BOMB!

Musical comedy about suicide terrorists closes after one night!

THE controversial off-Broadway musical comedy about Iraqi suicide bombers, Boom!, has closed immediately after its opening night.

"I just don't understand how it could have failed," bemusedly baffled writer-producer Salim al-Harkawi.

"It had everything going for it: delightful Iraqi music, traditional Iraqi dancing, a touch, exciting story and realistic explosion sound effects."

Boom! ended up selling only three tickets for its first — and last — night's performance. Two of the tickets went to Harkawi's publicist and the third to a parent who had just escaped from a nearby mental institution.

Harkawi says that despite the failure the show's musical numbers will always remain in his heart. They include "The Crown Jewels Belong to Your Corpse," "Oh What a Beautiful Explosion," "I Could Have Killed All Night," "If I Were a Dead Man," "Don't Cry For Me Nasreen," "I Just Met a Girl Named Zahara," and "Get Me to the Heaven on Time."

One benefit to have come out of Boom!, Harkawi says, is that it freed up Harkawi's time and energy to devote to developing his next major project:

CITY PASSES LAW AGAINST NON-SMOKERS

Light up or get outta town!

By Richard Kyle

A KENTUCKY town is going up in smoke — cigarette smoke, that is — since it became the first burg in the country requiring residents to light up!

Any adult who doesn't puff a cancer stick in Corapolis, Kentucky, is either escorted to the border, or put in a holding pen where residents blow smoke in his face until he gives in and lights up on his own.

And since the town imposed its ordinance, business has never been healthier.

"The citizens don't look so good, but the economy is rosy," jokes Mayor Archibald Gumm.

Oddly enough, the "Smokers Only" policy began as a jokey advertisement.

"There were a couple of townships around us that started imposing all these restrictive 'No smoking' laws," says Gumm. "And all the bars were grumbling that business was down eighty percent. We figured those people gotta drink somewheres, so we ran a funny ad in those places saying that not only CAN you smoke in our bars, you HAVE to smoke in our bars."

The response was overwhelming. Thousands of smokers from the surrounding areas came pouring into Corapolis.

"Once they were here, we couldn't very well tell them they couldn't smoke in the restaurants, hotels or public places," says Gumm. "So the town became one big smoking area."

The town quickly became a smoker's haven, but there were of course a few citizens who objected to the new law.

"We had to decide what to do when a lawyer from a prominent tobacco company paid them a visit.

"He said that, paradoxically, the only way to protect ourselves from these lawsuits was for Corapolis to declare itself 'Smokers Only,'" says Gumm. "That way non-smokers wouldn't complain that their health was at risk because they weren't supposed to be here in the first place."

While Corapolis became the first town in the country to declare itself "Smokers Only," it wasn't the first time the Kentucky municipality had been in the news for controversy. A few years ago it followed the lead of towns in Texas making it mandatory for all adults to carry guns in public. Another proposed law, requiring everyone to drink alcohol, was narrowly defeated.

"One way or another, we're all gonna kill ourselves here," jokes Burt Connors, a self-described "unrepentant drinker and smoker."

Anti-smoking groups have come to Corapolis to protest, but they quickly leave. "We just blow smoke in their faces, and they run away screaming," laughs Connors.

But now many more people come to Corapolis to live or visit.

"I come here every weekend," says Evelyn Hague, a nurse. "You could say I'm addicted to this place."

Sam Brandish, who runs the local mill, says he values the freedom of choice. "Everywhere else you look, the government's orderin' people to do what's 'good' for them. In Corapolis, our elected officials don't give a rat's patootie."

Looking at the constant haze that Corapolis finds itself in since passing the law, Mayor Gumm

JUNK FOOD SNACKS MAKE YOU SMARTER

By Lois Gaitherin

YOU CAN unleash the full potential of your brain and boost your I.Q., too, by munching on crunchy Chicken Puffs, Cheesie and Chewi — especially the "Running Iron" kind.

That's the word from psychologist Dr. William Springs, who says that as fewer than two people in a million possess the collection of food dyes, preservatives and artificial flavors found in the snacks stimulates the brain "to be the best it can be, performing at peak efficiency."

"I liken it to putting jet fuel in a Volkswagen — some pick-up, their little pathways to going to fly," explains the expert, of Los Angeles.

"What we've found is that chewy snacks are very, very good to the human brain.

"One study showed that college students who eat these immediately before tests perform up to 13 percent better than students who eat other junk foods or nothing at all.

"A second study compared the ability of rats to negotiate a difficult maze. Some of the animals were fed chewy snacks. Some were fed 'rabbit foods' like lettuce and boring vegan dishes. Still others [illegible] professional all-comers, finishing the maze a full minute before their closest competitors, the rats that chewed down on the Snappo and Bites."

The expert stopped short of recommending that people and the media to formulate their [illegible] purpose, but he did say they "could do worse."

HENPECKED HUBBY REMOVES WIFE'S VOICE BOX!

Man bribes sympathetic doctor into 'botching' tonsil operation

DR. FRANK PALLONE is facing 20 years in jail after taking a hefty bribe to remove a woman's voice box during a routine tonsillectomy, say prosecutors.

"I have a nagging witch for a wife, too. So many times I've wished I could take a pair of pliers, hold her down on the floor and rip out her larynx. I was glad to help a fellow sufferer."

Esther Shields, 30, and her timid lover Perry, 41, have been long time patients of Pallone. When he diagnosed Esther's persistent sore throats as a tonsil problem, Perry told his wife to go into the waiting room so he could speak to the physician alone.

According to Pallone, Perry said: "Esther and I have been married for 10 years. She cooks and cleans like an angel. After she mops the floor you could eat off it.

"But her blow hole sprints 24 hours a day. 'Perry, why does everyone's lawn look nicer than ours?' Perry, you're a loser. Perry, you're lousy in bed. Perry, you're lazy, fat and I wish I'd married someone else.'

"You see the dilemma I'm in, Doc. I want to keep her around because she'd be the perfect servant if she would only keep her trap shut.

"I have an assistant hidden away in the Caymans that

Fridge magnets are turning Earth upside down!

Scientists predict pollution, earthquakes ... and worse

THE Earth's magnetic field has diminished in strength by an alarming 10 percent in recent years and may soon collapse and then reverse, scientists warn.

And shockingly, researchers blame refrigerator magnets for the impending calamity!

"Refrigerator magnets are to the magnetosphere what pollution is to the ozone layer," explains German physicist Dr. Hermann Brucher, whose team made the unsettling discovery.

"In the past, when only a handful of these devices were in use, their effect was minimal. But when you talk about millions of refrigerator magnets world-wide, each generating its own electromagnetic field, the accumulative effect is enough to throw our planet out of kilter."

A reversal of the poles — which would cause compasses to suddenly point south instead of north — could take place "within six years," according to the scientists.

And the consequences for mankind will be grave:

● Shifts in the Earth's magnetic field can cause massive earthquakes and geomagnetic storms that shut down power grids.

● As the magnetic field diminishes, it ceases to shield Earthlings from deadly cosmic radiation.

● Satellites may go on the fritz or simply tumble out of the sky.

● Changes in the magnetic field could alter the chemistry of our atmosphere — rendering it poisonous.

"I'm not saying throw away all your refrigerator magnets — but I suggest limiting your collection to Global warming blamed for spontaneous combustions!

RESEARCHERS report an alarming 35 percent rise in spontaneous human combustion over the past year — and blame global warming for the epidemic!

What's more, for the first time, reports are flooding in of animals such as cows, dogs, cats and even beavers also inexplicably bursting into flames, according to Sweden's Magnusson Institute of Science.

"Animals have a delicate mechanism for regulating their body temperatures," says biologist Dr. Dolph Andersson. "We suspect global warming is throwing that mechanism out of whack, causing victims to radically overheat."

Global warming results from the release of industrial pollutants into the atmosphere. Significantly, the fastest growth of SHC has been at the polar regions where pollution has bored holes in the ozone layer.

"Antarctica is the coldest place on Earth, with temperatures as low as -128 Fahrenheit," says Dr. Andersson.

"When you see a penguin suddenly catch fire and explode you have to say, 'Maybe it's time we do something about global warming.'"

IT'S OFFICIAL — fat folks are sexier.

And that's why Americans, the fattest people on earth, have just been named the world's greatest lovers.

Italians [redacted] on their spaghetti and hopping mad Frenchmen [redacted] their [redacted] legs in disgust after a team [redacted] international researchers announced its findings [redacted] week.

"After three [redacted] of research in a [redacted] different countries we discovered two very interesting facts," [redacted] team leader Dr. [redacted] Boyd of Manchester, England.

"The first [redacted] that overweight people have a higher sex drive than their skinny cousins, and that Americans have replaced both the Italians and French as the world's greatest lovers.

"We used some basic criteria to come to this conclusion. The number of times males and females engaged in sexual intercourse, the pleasure and satisfaction index of both sexes, graded on a scale of one to 10, and finally the perceived attractiveness of the sexual partner, again on a one to 10 scale.

"In all three categories, Americans scored highest. And the fatter the man or woman, the higher the score.

"Americans say they engage in sexual intercourse 5.6 times a week, far surpassing the Italian average of 2.1, the French running a poor third at 1.0 even.

"When asked how much pleasure and satisfaction they get from sex, on a scale of one to 10, Americans, both male and female, entered the lists at an incredible 9.3. The Italian satisfaction index was 3.5 and the French a measly 2.3.

"When asked how attractive they considered their sex partner on a scale of one to 10, Americans responded with a whopping 10. The more fastidious Italians gave their partners a 6, and the French a woeful 2."

The study was bankrolled

WHOLE lotta lovin': Fat Americans blow away both the French and Italians in the bedroom!

was similar to a study they financed 25 years ago.

"Americans have come a long way since then," Dr. Boyd says. "In 1979 the world's greatest lovers were the Italians, with the French a close second. America tied with Ethiopia near the bottom of the list, beating only Russia and Morocco.

ARE YOU KIDDING?

According to a survey of congressmen, 1 in 3 refused to kiss fat babies on the campaign trail.

"The difference is that the fattest nation on Earth is now the sexiest, proving that fat can indeed be beautiful — it's all in the eye of the beholder.

"Scientists will now study our results and try to determine why being obese makes us sexier. Perhaps it's a throwback to cave man times when the fatter a man or woman was, the more likely they were to live as potential mates.

"Why sexual performance is enhanced among fat people is a mystery. It's possible that, since they know they are not skinny and attractive like the fashion model ideal, they try harder.

"And why Americans see their obese sex partner as attractive could be a changing beauty norm. The reign of the skinny could be over, giving way to the obese. Today, in America at least, fat's where it's at."

The French are crying foul over the report, saying that the enduring reputation of Frenchman as great lovers was established centuries ago and continues to this day.

"This report was skewed in favor of Americans who buy more beauty products than any other nation," sniffs a govern-ers rolling on a squeaking bed is sexy."

An Italian Ministry of Tourism spokesman adds: "People should vacation in Italy where they will quickly discover that we are still the greatest lovers on Earth.

"I do not believe this report. Somebody was bought — big time."

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE GOD TO WALK ON WATER!

By NICK JEFFRYS

Just follow Bible's step-by-step instructions, says expert

ANYONE can walk on water if they bother to read the directions in the Bible, says a theological scholar.

"Jesus strolled across the Sea of Galilee like it was no big deal ... and you can be just like Him," says Brother Michael Paulson, who questioned himself at St. Abernathy's Abby in France for 30 years strictly to study the Good Book.

"He left instructions in the New Testament, in which disciples Matthew, Mark and others described Him moseying back and forth on the surf."

To figure out the miracle water-walking technique, a person has to carefully read between the lines, decode the meaning of ancient nautical terms, analyze the personalities involved and calculate weather conditions.

"I devoted three decades of my life to ponderme each word in the Bible," says Paulson, 38, "and I finally got the method down pat. Now I

If you doze off, it can be stretched to 6 a.m., but no later. In the event you hit early morning rush hour traffic, you can possibly make it as late as 6:45 a.m. But definitely not after 7.

3. In every reference to the miracle, the breeze was strong and blowing against Jesus. The wind current probably helped hold Him up, says the expert.

4. When Jesus casually sauntered past a boat full of stoning, shocked men, they thought he was a ghost. That clearly indicates you

GHOST HUBBY DRIVES AWAY BOYFRIENDS

By RICK JEFFREYS

'The fat S.O.B. is destroying my happiness from the grave,' wife says

WIDOW Edna Johnson, 45, is so fed up with her late husband George wrecking her romances that she's turned to a paranormal expert for help.

"That fat S.O.B. destroyed any chance of happiness I had while he was alive and now he's doing it from the grave," steams Edna from her home outside Houston, Texas.

"When he was in the hospital I prayed the turd would croak so I could be free of him. When the monitor flat-lined I laughed so hard I wet myself.

"The second I got home from the funeral I jumped onto the Internet and joined five dating services."

But much to her surprise, George, who passed away from a heart attack due to morbid obesity at age 37, stuck around to torment Edna and her gentleman callers.

"I knew right away he was still here," says Edna. "When my first boyfriend Stanley brought me home after the movies, he 'tripped' and the back of his underpants somehow got hung up on the coat tree.

"The giant wedgie squeezed his testicles until they popped. George loved to give me wedgies while I was cooking at the stove. He thought that was hilarious. Hardee-har-har.

"He never wanted me to have any fun, kept me indoors with him to feed him around the clock and made fun of me. He called me the 'skinny witch.' We couldn't have children because George was too blubbery for marital relations."

Unfortunately, the taunting haunting was just getting started, and Edna's poor dates suffered repeated attacks.

"My second boyfriend Frank had his face pushed into a bowl of chicken soup I made for him," she recalls.

"Alan's beverage glass gave him a fat lip and broken teeth when it smacked him in the mouth as he was drinking. Roger's skull was fractured when the bathroom ceiling fell on his head and Hugh's leg broke in three places when the front door slammed on it.

"George was a mean person but he's a meaner ghost.

"When word got around the office that I was bad luck, my phone stopped ringing."

ARE YOU KIDDING?

Paranormal experts predict that by 2075, almost every house in the U.S. will be haunted by someone who once lived there.

Bruce Alcott, an old childhood pal, recently moved back to the area and looked in on Edna. The two became friends, then began to date.

"Bruce is a wonderful man," she says. "He's sweet and generous and kind. He says I'm beautiful. If George messes this up for me I'm going to . . . well, I was going to say 'kill him,' but he's already dead. Not that it did me any good."

In desperation, Edna consulted Professor Daniel Rudd at nearby Texas Spiritual University.

"The answer is simple," says Rudd. "I told Mrs. Johnson to pack her things and plant a 'For Sale' sign on the lawn. George is angry and 'stuck' in the place where he and Edna lived, but he can't follow her."

The happy widow followed Rudd's advice and is now living with Alcott in a gated community.

"We golf, swim, fish, boat and jog together," says Edna. "Next month we're getting married.

FAMILY VALUES GROUP DEMANDS UGLY DRESS CODE FOR TEACHERS

IN THE WAKE of an epidemic of teacher-student sex scandals, a leading family-values organization is demanding a strict dress code — for schoolteachers!

"One of the underlying causes of this nationwide problem is that many young teachers dress too sexy in an effort to look 'hip,'" says Claire MacEvoy of the American Parents Research Council.

"If a middle-school teacher waddles into the classroom wearing a tight mini-skirt or low-cut tank top that flaunt her sweaty thong, we can't blame red-blooded adolescent boys from getting the wrong idea.

ONE with al Hamid Hussein al-Akim, right, and three suspected dissidents begin puking.

IRAQI MAN SMELLS SO BAD HE'S BEEN LABELED WEAPON OF MASS DESTRUCTION!

A DEVASTATING weapon of mass destruction has been located in Iraq — and his name is Hamid Hussan al-Akim!

Hamid is the world's smelliest man. His body odor is so intense that Saddam Hussein's notorious Secret Police used him to torture hundreds of suspected dissidents and political activists at Abu Ghraib prison. Recently discovered files show that eight people died and dozens more were hospitalized after being forced to sit next to Hamid in a closed room.

"We know there were weapons of mass destruction in Iraq and now we have proof," said a high-ranking Bush administration official. "We plan to take our findings regarding Hamid to the United Nations to justify our position that Saddam posed an imminent threat to the United States and the rest of the world."

However, Hamid, 47, says he's as much a victim as the people who suffered in his presence.

"My extreme body odor is the result of a rare medical condition," he told the WWN by phone. "I should be facing a team of medical experts, not a military tribunal. I was forced at gunpoint to do the things they say I did, and I feel terrible about it. I only hope the rest of the world will understand."

ISLAND TRIBE GILLIGAN LIKE

'He created the Professor and Mary Anne and set them in the Garden of Eden,' says cult member

BORN-AGAIN Castaways on the uncharted desert Isle of Sakajaweewee drop to the sand and pray at the mere mention of their loving god Gilligan, says a British anthropologist.

"They believe the famous TV character from the ridiculous '60s program Gilligan's Island will come in glory to judge the living and the dead," says Dr. Trevor Smythe, who sought out the remote Indonesian enclave to film a BBC documentary.

"I first noticed the Gilligan image carved atop the traditional nude dancing poles. Upon closer inspection, I discovered that beneath Gilligan was the Skipper, the millionaire and his wife, the movie star, the professor and Mary Anne, here on Sakajaweewee's Isle."

Through his interpreter, Smythe asked Chief Chin-jow-haha about the "holy" engravings.

In perfect English, taught to him by a missionary, the leader answered: "Just sit right back and you'll hear a tale."

Smythe's crew shot while the villagers, wearing white sailor hats, fervently tried to convert them to Christianity.

"In the beginning, Gilligan created the heavens and the earth," intoned a woman named Mumu, her hands clasped in reverence. "Then Gilligan said 'Let there be light,' and there was light. He created the Professor and Mary Anne and put them in the Garden of Eden.

"The Skipper built an ark and named it the Minnow. The weather started getting rough, the tiny ship was ruined. If not for the courage of that fearless crew, the Minnow would be lost — the Minnow would be lost."

Chief Chin-jow-haha broke in to explain that years ago Pastor Hamilton had taught the people to worship Jesus.

"But he was wrong," the chief told Smythe. "The king of a faraway land called Hollywood came here on his yacht and told us many stories about Lord Gilligan — how He once helped Mr. and Mrs. Howell find love again, how He opened his mouth and radio music miraculously burst forth. He made peace between Mary Anne and Ginger after they drew a line down the center of their hut.

"The king said if we didn't believe in Gilligan we would be canceled!"

Smythe kindly thanked the islanders for their hospitality and went home to London to edit his documentary.

"Poor buggers, I didn't have the heart to tell them they'd been cuckolded by a rich American with a twisted sense of humor — that the 'miracles' were sitcom plots and Gilligan was only a character on a cheesy television comedy," sighs the anthropologist.

Smythe attempted to contact actor Bob Denver, who played the goofy first mate, and left a message detailing the strange cult and explaining how they worshiped Denver as a god.

"I never heard anything back in reply," says Smythe. "But rumor has it that just the night before, he retired from show business and moved to a new home in a place with no phone service.

"It was bloody bad timing on my part. I would have liked to get Mr. Denver's reaction to being loved and

ARE YOU HUNG?

Archaeologists in Egypt recently unearthed a clay pot estimated to be 2,000 years old, carved with the face of a woman who looks eerily similar to Zsa Zsa Gabor.

WORSHIPS A GOD!

ARE YOU AN OBNOXIOUS JERK?

Expert clues you in

DESPITE what your mother says, you might be totally obnoxious.

"Rude behavior is spreading through society like mold on rotting cheese," says noted psychologist and grocery checker Dr. Horace T. Wagstaff in his latest book, Lifestyles of the Neurotically Obnoxious. He asserts that if you continuously exhibit any of the following behavior, you are unquestionably obnoxious.

- You stubbornly perform the Heimlich maneuver on people who aren't choking.
- You make cookies out of putty to see if old people's dentures get stuck.
- You starch your roommate's underpants so he can't sit down at an important job interview.
- You sneeze on your friend's lunch so she'll offer to let you finish her burger and fries.
- You scratch other people's mosquito bites just when they stop itching.
- You spear the last piece of chicken with your fork and ask, "Anyone want this?"
- You laugh at people who didn't score at least 1200 on their SATs, even though you barely made 600.
- You have a runny nose and tell the hostess at a formal dinner party, "No, I don't need a tissue," and then blow your nose in her fancy linen napkin.
- You walk around the mall shouting into your cell phone, "I don't care if your name is Spielberg. I'm not making another movie with you."
